

John Edmiston is one of the most innovative Christians I know. He combines technology and innovation with deep theological knowledge with a lifetime of cross cultural missions and working with the poor. He is one of those people that God has used behind the scenes to play a key role in major movements of God across the world.

Dr. Andrew Sears, President, City Vision University

John is a man with many gifts, and he has chosen to dedicate his life and talents to using technology for the Kingdom of God. I trust his insights when it comes to technology, education, and working in developing world contexts.

Dr. Amanda Sanchez, Executive Director of CaCHE Global

John is an ideas man who gets things done in the global missions scene. With his executive managerial mind, his educational and cybertech skills, and his background in dealing with people, he adroitly works to serve and enable people and projects to move rapidly.

Viv Grigg, President, Urban Leadership Foundation

John is not just the grandfather of digital ministry, he continues to be an innovator and thought leader. He cares deeply about the least and the lost. He not only lives this out in the digital world, but he lives it out every day in our world of flesh and blood.

Clyde Taber, CEO Visual Story Network

Information To Transformation

1. Information Is Digital
2. Impartation Is Spiritual
3. Formation Is Personal
4. Transformation Is Communal

These four concepts guide Cybermissions as we help you not just to “dump information” on people but to lead them all the way through to the creation of digitally-enabled transformational and spiritual communities.

We do this by enabling you to:

Create high-quality digital resources

Deliver them widely using appropriate technology

Train facilitators in the use of the resources and technologies to build learning communities

Catalyze a digital and local movement around your ideas, resources and ministry.
